DESCRIPTION

Firstep, a program of OKC Metro Alliance, provides long-term residential substance use recovery services in Oklahoma City with no out-of-pocket program cost to residents. The program combines a structured recovery environment with employment, supportive services, recovery meetings, classes, and transportation.

Residents are employed through OKC Metro Alliance and work in community job placements for up to 40 hours per week. Income generated through these community partnerships helps support the residential program. Transportation is provided to and from work as well as qualifying appointments, services, and meetings. Residents also have access to recovery-focused classes and meetings offered on campus and online.

The residential program generally lasts from six months to two years and requires participants to be willing and medically able to work. Admission begins with a telephone screening. Applicants must have a state-issued ID and do not need health insurance to participate. Additional admission and medication requirements apply, so individuals should contact Firstep directly to confirm current eligibility and screening requirements.
